

University of California, Irvine
School of Social Ecology
Dean Search

The Deanship of the UCI School of Social Ecology offers a singular opportunity to lead a unit that can affect and respond to social conditions and outcomes during an extraordinary and historic era marked by generational fissures, racial injustice and inequality, global health crises, global climate change, and a challenged American democracy. Supported further by the infrastructure of a world-class university, UCI's Dean of Social Ecology will lead the School to achieve its ambitious objectives by advocating for its mission, inspiring excellence in research, scholarship and teaching, supporting intellectual achievement, driving interdisciplinary partnerships, and fostering a commitment to and support for equity, diversity and inclusion.
